REMINISCENCES.

By R. B. Berkeley.

The days of reconstruction in Virginia were dark days in the history of the State, but out of the bosom of that night shone many political and platform luminaries, and among them, the late Senator Daniel was facile princeps.
As platform orator, he will ever stand as peerless. His speeches were all delivered after the most careful and painstaking preparation. He never trusted to the inspiration of the moment. And just hence, I am reminded Blaine say that the most impressive impromptu speech he ever heard were those which had been the result of six months' preparation. Like Daniel, I evidently prepared before he spoke. I remember once at Appomattox Courthouse hearing one of those three-hour speeches of John Daniel, when he simply electrified his audience, and after that meeting we came together to Farmville, where he was booked to speak again at night. On reaching the street, a large crowd met him with a band of music and gave him cordial greeting. He was conducted across the street to the hotel portico, when there were spontaneous calls for a speech. He faced his audience, hesitated for a moment, and then spoke hesitatingly and with evident distrust. We then went to his room, and he said to me, "Why did you not tell me that this was on the program?" I was surprised that one so used to public speaking should have wanted for words in acknowledging the courtesy, but he said, "I can never speak without having first thought over what I would say." That evening in the courthouse, before a large audience, he repeated the speech of the morning, word for word, and with marvelous effect. I have heard wondering ever since why it was that a man so fluent and so forceful could not make a five minutes' speech without previous preparation. But that was John Daniel as he confessed himself to be.

The result of this was that he was never conspicuous in debate. Those of us who recall the Daniel-Cameron debates will bear testimony to this fact. Supreme as orator, and there was glory enough for one life. Of all memorial addresses delivered upon the floors of Congress, those of Senators Root and Lodge upon Senator Daniel are far better than any it was ever my privilege to read. The subject was inspiring, and the coworkers who had dealt with him men of great genius.

The strongest political speech I ever heard was delivered by the late Colonel John B. Baldwin, of Staunton, in the Greecy campaign. It was hard to convince the Virginians, native and to the manner born, that it was the duty to vote for Horace Greeley for the highest office in the gift of the American people, but at the conclusion of that speech I felt that Virginians had nothing else to do. A man of superior person, dignified of mien, graceful in bearing, choice in his English and a socialist without a peer.

It was often my privilege to hear "Ran" Tucker, known of all men who knew him as a great constitutional lawyer, and who added wit to wisdom, fun to force, lightness to logic, so that while he convinced he also charmed. If I may be permitted to say so, however, and I do it with great respect to his memory, for I was not a scene witness, I do not think he honored him, but loved him. I venture to say that his fondness for fun somewhat weakened his force. I recall an amusing incident that happened at Blackstone. It was on a day when Mr.
Tucker and other distinguished Virginians had addressed the sovereigns and after the speaking went to dine with a citizen of the place. Just as the diners had been seated the host asked the one next to him to pronounce the blessing, and, not being accustomed even to Mr. Tucker and prayer, he turned to Mr. Tucker and said, "Ran, you do it; I can't." Ran, always ready, of course, responded, and with due reverence.

The late John Goode, justly called "The Grand Old Man," never failed to please those who heard him, and such was his urbanity of manner and goodness of heart that he never left a sting behind. The man who did not respect John Goode did not respect himself.

The late Governor O'Ferrall, a man of martial appearance and soldierly bearing, was the cavalier of the platform. His presence was impressive, and he moved his audiences as a forest that has been swept by a storm.

Governor McKinney, one of the most amiable and lovable of men, wielded a battle ax at the bar and on the platform. As gentle as a woman in the social world, when engaged in political controversy he became a tornado.
Men winced beneath his blows, and when the speaking was over those who had been most roughly handled by him were first to greet and congratulate him. He was one of the few men I ever knew who lost no friend by anything said in courtroom or spoken from the stump.

"Colonel" Jim Marshall (peace to his memory) was a man to be dreaded.
He, too, wielded a battle ax and flashed a semitar of wit that played havoc with opponents. Big of body, large of heart, and intensely loyal to Virginia, he defended her with a courage and conviction forceful and formidable.

The late W. W. Berry, of Bedford city, played a part in politics absolutely unique. He was called upon for much service, and always was respected to close meetings with what he was accustomed to call "arousement," and those who remember him on such occasions will bear testimony to the fact that it was "arousment" indeed. He began with a laugh; the laugh continued until the close, when sides were sore from laughing. His store of anecdotes was unfathomable, and he was a great proficient with consummate skill. After Daniel and Goode and McKinney and others had spoken, Berry kindled new enthusiasm and dismissed the audience with the benediction of good humor. To make men laugh is no small gift, and wisely used, is a great power.

Virginia history records a "Big Four" in the Legislature, and there was also a "Big Four" on the stump—Massey, Riddleberger, Blair and Blair—and it must be confessed that it was a rare combination of speaking power.
They differed widely, the one from the other. Paul was solid and argumentative, Riddleberger was daring and dashing, Blair given to pyrotechnies, while "Parson" Massey was simply "Parson" Massey, for there has only been one of them. He had no grace of person, no sweetness of voice, no charm of diction, but, beyond controversy, he stood head and shoulders above all men who ever fought Democracy on Virginia soil. He had mastered the subject of readjustment knew his lesson by heart, and was one whom no man coveted to meet in debate. Absolutely unimpassioned, imperturbable, smiling at abuse, and free of criticism, he never went down in defeat before any antagonist. On a memorable occasion he was booked to speak in Farmville, and the Democrats, anxious to have a foe man worthy of his best steel, sent for the late Judge S. F. Coleman, of Cumberland, a sturdy son of Virginia, who generally carried the crowd and crushed his opponent; when the Coleman-Massey debate begined, Coleman's best friends regretted that it had taken place. Massey smiled while Coleman smote him, but when Massey came to reply, even "Sam" himself had to run under fire, while his

SALT IS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We eat too much meat, which clogs Kidneys, then the Back hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull liver in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salt from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine.
This famous salt is the most complete and perfect of all salts, as it contains of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to stomach, clogged kidneys and stimu-lates to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salt is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which everybody should take, now and then, to keep their kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble, while it is only trouble—Advertisement.
